the fact is, though, that a large number of people are still in the dark about the importance of the Internet in the workplace. The authors of the study found that many people still believe that the Internet is just a tool for communication, rather than a platform for collaboration and innovation. This is a common misconception that needs to be addressed.

There is a growing body of research on the impact of the environment on health. This research suggests that the environment can have a significant impact on health, and that this impact can be both direct and indirect. For example, exposure to air pollution can lead to respiratory problems, and exposure to water pollution can lead to gastrointestinal problems. Additionally, the environment can also have an indirect impact on health through its influence on lifestyle factors. For example, a lack of access to green spaces can lead to a more sedentary lifestyle, which in turn can lead to a higher risk of obesity and related health problems.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or respiratory disease. They were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle, while the training group participated in a 12-week program of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during a submaximal exercise test at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

No. 8 in kidnapping most wanted nabbed

THE COUNTRY'S eighth most wanted kidnapper has been arrested and was presented to President Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday.

Teddy Padre, who had a P500,000 bounty on his head, was arrested in a Manila suburb on Monday on an informant's tip. Police accused him of being the mastermind in the March 2001 abduction of a businesswoman, who subsequently escaped.

No other details of the capture were available.

"His picture was seen by a concerned citizen on a poster of wanted kidnappers," the President said.

The suspect was the sixth kidnap gang leader to be arrested or killed by the National Anti-Kidnapping Task Force (Naktf) since December.

The President said that since she appointed former Defense Secretary Angela Reyes Naktf chief nearly four months ago, the anti-kidnapping campaign has netted 71 suspects, including nine on the most wanted list.

Crossed out

She then crossed out Padre's picture, which was No. 8, on Naktf's Most Wanted Kidnappers poster.

The President also disclosed that US Secretary of State Colin Powell recently called her to offer his congratulations on the rescue of kidnapped American citizen Alastair Joseph Onglingawan, who had been held in chains by his captors for over three weeks.

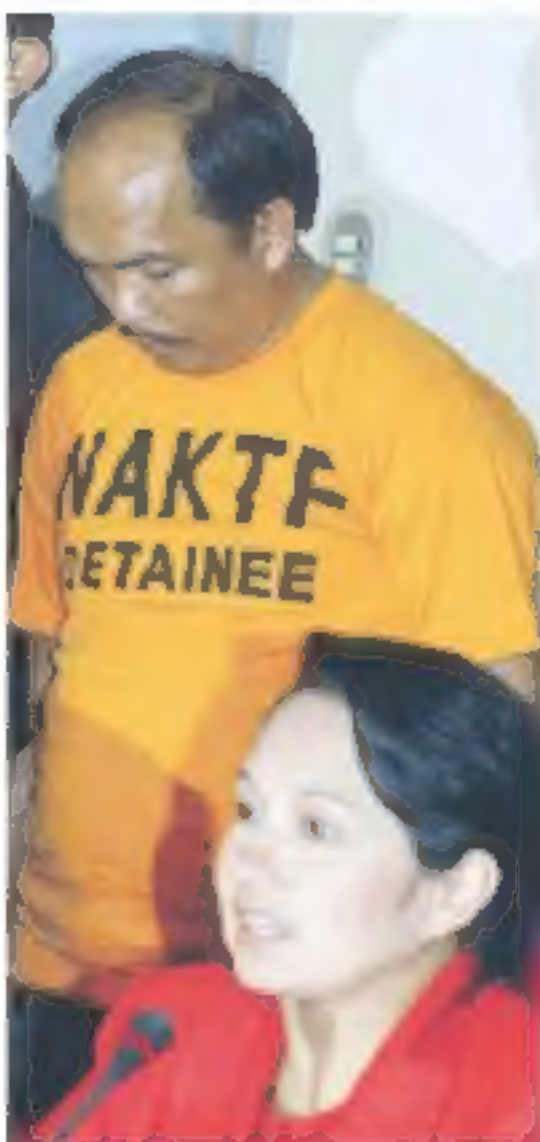

The 15-year-old victim was allegedly found in the home of Hong Kong native George Yeo, a resident of Bacoor, Cavite, who was arrested and confessed to taking part in the 2001 kidnapping of a Briton.

"In fact, Colin Powell called me up to congratulate you (the police) and to thank us," Mr. Macapagal said.

She said she and Powell also discussed other "foreign policy" matters but she did not elaborate.

Onglingawan, a Los Angeles resident, arrived in the Philippines last month to look into the possibility of investing in an information technology venture.

The President then differentiated the anti-kidnapping campaign of her administration with that of her detained predecessor Joseph Estrada, saying the latter had relied on paying ransoms rather than going after the kidnappers.

"During the time of Estrada, the emphasis was on getting the victim, usually through ransom. Now the strategy is to go after the kidnappers, a dedicated campaign," the President said.

She said her anti-kidnapping campaign was also more effective because it drew the cooperation of the community.

She said publishing the names and photographs of the most wanted kidnappers had led to the success of her campaign.

Mr. Macapagal also said that during Estrada's time, captured kidnappers could get out on bail. Now, she said, they stay in detention while being tried in court. AFP, Juliet Lalong-Jarillon

Namfrel's idea of stopping flying voters is messy

By Margherita Orelia

"DIP half of your index finger in indelible ink to prevent the proliferation of flying voters."

A not-so-neat but effective trick suggested by National Citizens' Movement for Free Elections (Namfrel) National Chair Jose Concepcion Jr. during the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines meeting in Makati yesterday.

Concepcion said the present practice of applying indelible ink on just the voter's nail is insufficient and could easily be reversed.

"Dipping one's finger is the best guarantee against flying voters," he said. "It's visible, cheap and durable."

The Namfrel chair stressed that his suggestion has already been tried in Cambodia and India and was proven to be successful.

He added that the Commission on Elections (Comelec) should stop importing indelible ink and order the materials from local manufacturers.

"We, together with the Institute of Science and Technology, the Comelec, and other political parties, would then check if the ink would pass our standards," Concepcion said.

He also suggested that the Comelec hire third or fourth year college students as election assistants because of the shortage of schoolteachers willing to do the job.

There are 200,000 to 250,000 precincts in the country that are in need of 620,000 teachers. Yet only 200,000 teachers will be deployed by the Department of Education.

"Many teachers even want to be paid P2,000 a day which the government could not afford. The Comelec should consider our proposal to deploy identical young adults who could also do the job well," Concepcion said.

And one last suggestion: The Comelec should also come out with a list identifying the country's hot spots as soon as possible. This way, unnecessary threats and violence in these places will be avoided, he said.

Comelec Chair Benjamin Abalos, who also attended the meeting, was apprehensive about Concepcion's suggestions. He said dipping fingers in indelible ink is not necessary.

"A drop (of ink) on the nail would last two to three days if done properly," Abalos said.

He added that the government has other members of the civil service to act as election assistants. They could also hire members of the Reserved Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) if needed.

The Comelec chair did say they would seriously consider Concepcion's suggestion to buy indelible ink from local manufacturers instead of importing them.

Disqualification may become an argument against GMA

By [Name]

It is a common sight to see a candidate for a political office who is disqualified from running. This is usually because of some technicality or a legal issue. In the case of GMA, this could become a significant argument against their participation in the upcoming elections. The disqualification process is often a complex one, involving various legal and administrative steps. It is important for the public to understand the reasons behind such decisions and the potential impact on the electoral process.

Ries

Party's New Style

The political landscape is constantly evolving, and parties must adapt to new challenges and opportunities. The introduction of a new style by a party could be seen as a strategic move to attract more voters or to differentiate themselves from their competitors. However, it is essential to evaluate the effectiveness of such changes and their impact on the party's overall performance. The public should remain vigilant and engaged in the political process to ensure that the interests of the nation are protected.

Men on a mission?

Men on a mission? This phrase often refers to individuals who are dedicated to a cause or a specific task. In the context of the Philippines, it could refer to men who are working to improve the lives of their fellow citizens or to those who are serving the nation in various capacities. The concept of being 'on a mission' implies a sense of purpose and commitment that goes beyond personal interests. It is a quality that is highly valued in leadership and in the public service sector.

Anti-democratic

Anti-democratic actions or policies are those that undermine the principles of democracy, such as free elections, the rule of law, and the protection of individual rights. In the Philippines, there have been concerns about certain actions taken by the government that may be considered anti-democratic. It is crucial for the public to monitor such developments and to hold the government accountable for its actions. Democracy is the foundation of a just and equitable society, and it must be protected at all costs.
